A refined and exhilarating reinterpretation of West Side Story made by a talented trio of three French contemporary improvisers.

Created in 2014 and winner of the Jazz Migration program in 2016, the band has already recorded one album and played more than 50 concerts. This year, Un Poco Loco seize a mythical monument of American culture in order to elaborate a refined work of sound and dramaturgy, mixing the traditional vocabulary of jazz with the musical language of contemporary musicians.

For this new record, Feelin' Pretty, the trio decided to tackle a monument of American culture: West Side Story. Leonard Bernstein's unforgettable standards are first stripped naked and then dressed up in new fancy clothes. An unexpected interpretation of extrapolations, glimpses and playing hide-and-seek with the original score of this great musical, through personal arrangements and original compositions.

Tony, Maria, the Jets and the Sharks are gently hustled, and the magnificent score becomes a preamble to the improvisers's wildest games.
